

Job Position Title: Entry-Level Designer

Landscape Architecture Bureau [LAB] is a well-established design firm based in Washington, DC with a focus on making original, memorable places and a commitment to promoting biodiversity.

We are looking for an entry level designer (a recent grad or someone with a year or so of experience) with the burning desire to make great, authentic places.

Our project mix has historically been about 1/2 private, mixed-use projects, about 1/3 public projects (parks, library grounds, schools, etc.) and some other interesting odds and ends. We are looking for designers who are committed to the highest design standards and who have the form-making and collaboration skills to make it happen. The right personality is critical - curious, engaged, resourceful, energetic and generous, not to mention smart and funny. LAB presents an opportunity to lead, to grow professionally and to design great places in a collegial environment.

Our team members regularly visit projects on-site, so our preferred candidates should either live in or be willing to relocate to the DC-area.

Please check us out at www.labindc.com. For those interested in applying, send a resume and portfolio to info@labindc.com. We look forward to meeting you.